Bind and Gag O. T. Dispatcher; Work Calmly; Make Escape

No Number On Auto; Thought To Be Oldsmobile; Police At Scene Few Minutes Later

Three unmasked thugs walking boldly into the office of the San Francisco-Oakland Terminal Railway company, Nineteenth street and Macdonald avenue at 7:05 o'clock this morning, bound and gagged Elmer Woodworth, car dispatcher and cashier and while he struggled to free himself, the bandits hastily filled a leather suitcase with $1800 in silver and escaped. The money stolen was a portion of Sunday's receipts. In their haste the thugs overlooked $500 gold which lay partially hidden beneath a pile of papers on Woodworth's desk.

ROBBERY PLANNED.

Police believe the robbery to have been carefully planned. Woodworth's first intimation of the hold-up came with an order to "throw up his hands." The demand was made at his back. Turning he saw the muzzle of a revolver pointed at him. Forgetting the demand Woodworth grabbed the gun.

"Let go or I'll kill you" remarked the thug. Woodworth held on. A struggle followed.

Then two more men appeared. One held the cashier while his hands were tied with a heavy rope behind his back. Following this he was secured to a desk. As Woodworth continued to fight back with his feet, the thug who had first entered stepped to the car dispatcher's side and rapped him across the forehead with the butt of his revolver.

UNCONSCIOUS

That was all Woodworth remembered.

He regained consciousness a few minutes later and after much wriggling managed to reach a telephone.

CALLS POLICE

His call to police headquarters brought out Sergeant Roy Kreamer and Inspectors Phillips and Kirkpatrick. Meantime Woodworth had notified the police of Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda. The police following a brief inspection and questioning of Woodworth notified the sheriff's office.

IS PUZZLED

Woodworth described the leader of the trio to be of medium build with very sharp features. "I can identify them if they are caught." says Woodworth.

The other two thugs were of build somewhat smaller than that of the leader and wore dark clothes.

According to the police the robbery is one of the most daring attempted in this city for years.

The automobile used by the trio was identified by Oakland police as having been stolen on Thirty-first street, that city.

THE ONE VALUABLE STUDY

The graduating class of Princeton University has given the world its opinion on a number of important matters, such as the students' favorite fiction writer, their favorite sport, their favorite movie actress, and, last, but not least, their idea of the most valuable course of study offered by the university.

It isn't football, nor calculus, nor Greek, nor Assyriology, nor anything else that anybody outside of an up-to-date college would be likely to guess. It is a course in money and banking.

Old grads may tear their hair at hearing this. Purely academic souls, imbued with the ancient notion that college should preserve the "humanities" in all their sacredness, and teach nothing immediately useful, fall be scandalized. But it cannot be helped. The world changes, and the colleges change with it, and the young men who go to our higher institutions of learning in ever increasing numbers from all walks of life are a big factor in forcing the change. Instead of being content with merely polishing up their minds for ornamental purposes, they enter with the greatest enthusiasm on studies that help them to live and work. And if blear-eyed scholars want to call an interest in money and banking a sorid thing, why, let them.

Such a preference, however, is not sordid. The students are interested in money as the universal tool of life. They see in banking a vocation which is gaining immensely in scope and power and opportunity for usefulness. They appreciate the value of the new partnership between scholarship and finance, which is being fostered by the nation's leading bankers. Such a partnership tends to raise the standard of American banking and opens a new field of public service to ambitious and intelligent young men.

WOMEN AND HER CLUB

Occasionally we hear a fellow make a jocular remark about women's clubs. He shouldn't do it. He's in the wrong pew.

Women's clubs are a good thing when properly conducted, just as are the clubs to which men belong.

In old times much of the visiting was done across the garden fence, but today it is different. Women are more mentally developed today than they were fifty or a hundred years ago, and their knowledge naturally craves an outlet and an opportunity for expansion.

The club is the medium for both.

When a body of women get together, each with some idea for the betterment of political or social conditions, the best that is in them collectively will come to the front, and will serve to broaden and develop the moral and material welfare of the community. Women have brains and possess the ability to apply them when afforded an opportunity.

IS VILLA DEAD?

The dispatches tell us this morning that General Villa, the Mexican bandit, for whose arrest an United States expedition to Mexico was organized, is dead. According to the story his body was dug up in some remote mountain section of the country by a nephew of the head of the de facto Mexican government.

On the face of it the story bears unmistakable evidence of falsehood. It sounds "fishy," to say the least and the United States government is justly suspicious of the tale and suspision is justified by the evident strong desire of the Mexican authorities, if there is such a thing in Mexico, to get the American soldiers out of the southern republic.

But there are those who cannot be deceived in this matter who will see the supposed corpse of Villa. They will know the remains if they are of the late bandit and will be abe to identify them. Funston says that there must be no doubt in the matter and will not be when the final decision in the matter is made. On the truth or falsity of the report depends whether the United States troops will remain in Mexico or return to the United States. We believe the matter can safely be left in his hands and in the hands of the war department in Washington.

POOR MEN IN PUBLIC LIFE

When the president of Yale said that the public life of this country needs a large body of young men of independent means he was influenced, it is to be feared, by the interests of his own hundreds of young men of independent means.

Theoretically, the young man of independent means is the young man who can best afford to devote himself to the public service. But, in practical fact, that is just the kind of young man which the public can least afford to have in charge of it's affairs.

The young man, fresh from toil, with the inspiration that comes from empty hands, and with sympathies undefiled, is the one who through all history has held the pilot wheel of the ship of progress with the steadiest and stoutest heart.

The man of independent means, be he young or old, is out of sympathy with the real emotions and the environment of the masses. He views the common lot only as one looks into a house through a window. He knows the common life only as one who dwells in the hills knows the life of the valleys.

What we need in pubic life, and in private life, too, is not the man "rich enough to resist temptation," but the man honest enough to despise it, the man too true in his sympathies to mistake public good and too quick in his intelligence to be misled.

CARELESS PASSENGERS

The Pennsylvania railroad is taking justifiable pride in the fact that in the past two years it has carried 362,000,000 passengers without the loss of a single life in a train accident.

That is a better record than the passengers themselves have. For the railroad's statement does not mean that no passengers were killed: Sixteen of them lost their lives through their own fault. While the road was doing its best to safeguard them, they mullified its efforts by stepping in front of trains at stations, climbing on and jumping off moving trains, standing too near the edge of platforms, etc.

Likewise, while the road has greatly decreased the mishaps among its own employees and cut down the number of persons killed in walking along the track, it has not been able to eliminate such accidents, and never will. Train hands and tramps, like passengers, will take chances which a well managed railroad itself will not take.

It is well to remember this when criticizing the railroads. Some lines, of course, are much to blame, even yet, for their lack of safety devices and neglect of proper precautions. But it is doubtful whether, in the case of the average railroad, the general public itself does not deserve at least half the blame for the high casualty rate.

You are so smart, you may understand how a nurse can fall in love with a sick man. Generally speaking a sick man is the soriest sight.

The truth about a great number of the pioneers is that they invade the new country because it looked easier to make a living there.

There are times when life seems somewhat hard and rough, but there is consolation in the thought that few men get the worst of it in their obituaries.

"HER HUSBAND MAY BE PROSPEROUS, BUT HER CLOTHES DON'T SHOW IT"

"That's true, Amy, But whether her husband is getting along well or not, she could wear smart, attractive clothes by getting them AT CHERRY'S.

"I've worn pretty thing for years, simply by using my credit to get them when I NEEDED THEM—instead of waiting until I had the money.

"It's a wonder to me that every woman doesn't appreciate the advantage of trading at CHERRY'S.

"Ive thought that mayself, Amy, but there are hundreds already in Oakland who depend upon CHERRY'S for everything, and new names are added to their books all the time. It's a splendid lotation, I think, at 515 13th street, between Washington and Clay street.

"And CHERRY'S assortments are so exquisite this spring, Barbara! I never saw lovelier things.

"Perhaps you know CHERRY'S addresses. There ladies' store is at 515 13th street, and remember they have another beautiful store exclusively for men right across the street at 528 13th street. Their two San Francisco stores are located at 1009 Market street and 2400 Mission street. Other stores on the Pacific coast are at Portland, Tacoma, Sacramento and Los Angeles.—Advt.

Big Bill, the Wrestling Grizzley, and one of the great feature acts with the Barnes circus, which will exhibit in Richmond, Wednesday, April 19.

And now for happy boys and girls who by their industry have won prizes of free tickets to the Al G. Barnes big four ring wild animal circus which exhibits here Wednesday in afternoon and evening performances.

These children will get to see that most wonderful of all animal aggregations in which more than 1000 wild and ferocious beats have been trained by Mr. Barnes and his assistants to perform remarkable feats of riding, diving juggling, dancing, marching, poising, trapeze work, fire-juggling and other acts.

We are all sorry we could not give more prizes. Some amazing new animals were brought to light and now one of the greatest pleasures is to come.

Every prize winner must be at the Record-Herald office at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning at which time Al. G. Barnes, the world's greatest animal scientist and trainer, and owner of the Big Barnes shows, will meet the children, present them with their prizes and shake hands with them.

Now, prize winners, be prompt so as not to keep Mr. Barnes waiting if you want to see him. He is a busy man, but he loves children and he wants to see the little folks who have written so much about his pets. And the Record-Herald is glad it was able to help some of the little ones see this marvelous collection of performing animals. The Barnes show is a truly great circus.

One big, thrilling, amazing feature on the program of the Barnes wild animal circus, is a lion act, 30 of the full-grown, jungle bred African maneaters being assembled therein.

This group represents the largest lion act ever successfully presented to the public and the entire lot are handled at one time by one man—Herr. Louie Roth, a lion trainer of international fame. The group if placed on the market would easily sell for $50,000.

Armed only with a small whip, Roth crowds his way among the snarling, ferocious beasts and in a fearless manner institutes some of the most thrilling spectacles ever witnessed. Mounting the entire number into pyramids and piles on the floor, the trainer sits and lies on the topmost and fiercest one. Placing his head in the mouth of another and feeding the man-eater raw meat from his lips is part of the trainers work. The act ends with the lion doing a free-for-all hurdle race around the arena.

Other thrilling wild animal acts are presented by Miss Martha Florine, who appears with a large number of leopards, jaguars and pumas—a mixed group and one of the hardest to control. Miss Mable Stark shows trained Royal Bengal and Siberian tigers, the most ferocious and untractable animals known. Thirty grizzly, cinnamon, Siberian, black and polar bears—all trained, are shown by Maj. Thornton. Bill, the wrestling grizzly, is among the lot.

A large herd of elephants, especially well trained, are put through many interesting exercises. Camels, seals and sea lions, zebras, kangaroos, hyenas, dogs, monkeys, sacred cattle, ponies and horses to the number of several hundred are a part of the Barnes animal-acting troupe.

Performances are given at 2 and 8 p. m., and the new, glittering six-band parade at 10:30.

Doors open at 1 and 7 p. m. Free high dive thrill at grounds at 1 p. m.

Frank Marcolla, a former sandlotter and schoolboy of this city played with the St. Mary's team against the Richmond Elks yesterday afternoon.

BOHEN PITCHES ELKS TO EASY VICTORY OVER ST. MARY'S TEAM

Irish and arrogant, Pat Bohen, from Kilkenny, county Cork, whose mouth carries more tobacco than most cigar stores, proved an enigma to nine stalwart college students from St. Mary's yesterday.

Pat didn't even perspire. He just kept spitting and pitching. Then as he heaved the final throw across the plate he turned and saw a 3 to 1 score chalked for the Elks.

Pat was so happy he forgot about the European war. He even shook hands with Rudolph Schimpff, whose uncle was a lieutenant in the Limbergguards.

NOTES FROM THE PLAYHOUSES

PANTAGES THEATRE (Oakland)

He's here!

And he's showed Oakland what kind of "movie" comedy is going to be sent out to the entire world from this city, if the new Pantages motion picture studio, for which the Chamber of Commerce is now working, is located in Oakland.

Chris Richards, noted English comedian, is the most remarkable laugh maker the world has ever seen. He hardly speaks a word, his comedy, as he offers it, is almost all pantomimic. He just comes out, dances about, contorts face and body, and from the moment he appears laughs rise.

He is to a derby hat what Paderewski is to a piano or Nat Leipzig is to a pack of cards. Every comedy trick known to man is his. His, too are known to none other. "The funniest man in the world," they call him. A crowded house at the Pantages last night agreed with the verdict. It laughed continuously—and every one in the big audience saw ahead success for the new move of the vaudeville magnate, making films of this newest luminary on the motion picture firmament.

The new Pantages motion picture studio is the talk of Oakland's business men and the Chamber of Commerce. It will employ hundreds and involve hundreds of thousands of dollars investment. It is the biggest thing of all Pantages big deals.

Michael Emmett, the famous Irish tenor, and the Seven Bracks, noted risley artists, are two other big special features of a glorous bill of the finest vaudeville at the Pantages this week. The bill is a rare treat for the theator goer, for it is a bill to describe which would exhaust the dictionary's supply of superlatives. Emmett and his company—including his tame ravens, his dog, his doves and his rooster, offer a glompse of an Irish farm, and he and the Irish beauty with him sing his own compositions and others. It is a charming breath of the "Ould Sod" and different from any offering of its kind ever seen in Oakland.

The Bracks are famed. They perform sensational feats galore, and keep their audience breathless throughout their mammoth act.

Frank Gable presents Nana and Ostiz Martinez, genuine Spanish dancers, in a glimpse of "Old California." The Packard Four have a wonderful supply of rapid fire comedy, music and joy. Donita sings a number of songs in her inimitable way. Violet and Charles in a trapeze novelty, and another thrilling episode of "The Iron Claw" round out the bill.

Don Williams, former Standard Oil employee, and well known member of Richmond lodge of Elks has been appointed a deputy sheriff. Williams will commence his work as an officer watching John Plevas the alleged bay pirate.
